

Dear Sir or Madam:

It is imperative that the FCC does not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy Law protections. Since I've been "on the list" I rarely receive annoying phone calls, which generally would come at the most inopportune of times. I used to receive in excess of 10-12 phone calls per week from demanding, most times overbearing sales people. My husband and I work an unusual schedule and we would receive calls early in the morning while we were still sleeping. If you decrease the protection of the Indiana Telephone Privacy Law, I will undoubtedly go buy a TeleZapper or pay for a privacy manager service, though I do feel that I should not have to pay for the respect of my privacy. As a person "on the list" I'm not depriving any sale from occurring, in fact I'm doing those businesses and the telemarketers a favor by not wasting their time. I'M NOT BUYING! AND I DON'T THINK I SHOULD PAY FOR PRIVACY.

MOST DISCOURAGED,
PATRICK AND LORI MOSLEY
